

Celia Gkavanozi

Co-funded by the European Union

Brief CV

Athens, Greece

Lecturer

Metropolitan College

Biological Psychology, Research Methods in Psychology, Academic Writing

Pedagogical pathway

Inclusion is the mission of the teacher

We live in the era of inclusion and especially for teachers that delve deep into psychological constructs, making everyone feel safe and providing them a space where they feel represented is the cornerstone of the educational procedure.

Create a POSITIVE and INCLUSIVE Learning ENVIRONMENT

Agility is the answer

Reading the room to understand and feel the needs of each student group and subsequently being able to adjust your course to their level and interests can guarantee that every student will leave the classroom with a new skill set.

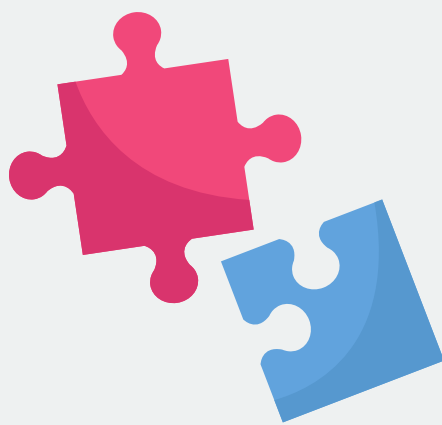

Technological way

Different platforms to accommodate different needs

Digital tools can enhance the educational procedure if used correctly. Thus, working with different tools based on what needs to be achieved is an important element of the course's structure. No matter your need is; organizing, presenting, or receiving feedback, there is a digital tool for you out there.

Gamification

The answer to every question, no matter the student's age, is gamification. Students have a limited attention span, especially online; thus, using technology to create an environment where knowledge is a game will keep them focused and entertained.

Always go for interaction

Digital tools with features such as Break out rooms of Microsoft Teams can create the ambience of a study group in the digital world; this gives you the opportunity to work simultaneously on various elements of a project with different groups or observe how different groups with different learning needs and personalities deal with the same question.

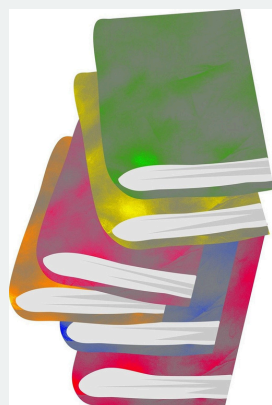

Co-funded by the European Union

HOW TO BE A EDUPRENEUR

Keep learning

In order to understand how to accommodate your students' different learning needs, you need to keep learning yourself. Lifelong learning, especially in the digital era, is essential to anyone that wishes to be an educator since knowledge evolves faster than humans.

Become the student

Do you remember how it feels to be a student? If not, you need to work on this. Empathy is the key to educational excellence, and you need to keep working on it.

In order to teach someone, you need to see the most difficult concepts through their eyes and explore how you can break them down into easy bits. This will also give you the opportunity to think of new courses that you could design based on your students' needs.

Feedback is your friend

In the same way, you tell your students that mistakes are part of the learning process, you need to embrace the idea of negative feedback yourself. Grasping and assessing the slightest change of tone in the student's voice, posture, or gaze will make your course unique and memorable.

More info...

Co-funded by the European Union

Lanbide Heziketako ikastetxe publikoen sarea
Red de centros públicos de Formación Profesional

